Program Results and Effect:

Commission members and the Director meet with individuals and community-based groups around the State and country that provide services and advocacy for women and families. The Commission shares information and plans collaborative programs, such as educational workshops on finances and legal issues. The Director takes statewide information and referral calls on the Commission's toll-free telephone line on issues ranging from starting a new business to divorce and domestic violence. Commissioners have collected hundreds of referral sources from each of their geographic regions for the Director to utilize. The toll-free number is listed in the telephone directories of five major Idaho cities and is listed on a web site home page for the Commission. The "Women and Laws" handbook that the Commission publishes provides invaluable information to all Idahoans concerning aspects of our legal system that impact them and their families. The 1998 revision was published in Spanish for the very first time. Commission members track legislation and state agency activities that impact women and families. They communicate Commission positions to legislators and provide legislative information to women and family organizations. As a result, women and families of Idaho are represented by legislative advocates and are better informed about the legislative process. The overall effect of this program is to improve the lives of women and children in the State of Idaho. Education is the key component in assisting women to better provide for themselves and their families. The Commission continues to network with organizations and agencies that assist women and families transition from welfare to self-sufficiency. In April of 2000, the Commission conducted the first statewide conference on women's issues.
